Introduction

In this quantifiers game, students race to complete questions with quantifiers (much, many, a few, enough, a lot of, any) and then answer the questions by speaking for 30 seconds.

Procedure

Divide the students into groups of four.

Give each group a set of question cards.

Tell the students to shuffle the cards and place them face-down in a pile on the desk.

Explain that the student with the card should also act as time keeper.

Students take it in turns to turn over the top card from the pile and look at the question without showing it to anyone.

The student with the card then reads the question to the group, saying the word 'blank' where the quantifier should go, e.g. 'Are there BLANK of restaurants in your town or city?'

The other students then race to repeat the question, inserting the correct quantifier as they speak.

The first student to repeat back the entire question correctly must then answer the question by speaking for 30 seconds.

If the student manages to do this, they keep the card.

If the student stops speaking before the time limit has been reached, another student can try to steal the round by repeating the question and talking for 30 seconds.

The game continues until all the question cards have been used.

The student with the most cards at the end of the game wins.
