Introduction

In this past simple information gap activity, students write and then ask Wh questions in order to complete a text about Leonardo DiCaprio's life.

Procedure

Divide the students into two groups (A and B).

Give each student a corresponding worksheet.

Tell the students that they are going to read some information about Leonardo DiCaprio's life.

Point out that there are some details missing from the text and that they are going to write the past simple Wh Questions they need to find out the missing information.

Allow students time to read the text and ask any questions about the vocabulary.

Tell the students to work with a partner from the same group for the first part of the activity.

Working together, students write down the ten past simple Wh questions they need to find out the missing information.

All the students must write the questions down in the spaces provided on their worksheet.

When the students have finished writing, check their questions.

Next, students pair up with someone from the other group.

Have Student A and B sit facing each other.

Student A goes first and asks Student B the first question on their worksheet.

After that, students take it in turns to ask and answer questions in numerical order to find out the information missing from their own text.

Students write the information in the blank spaces in the text on their worksheet.

When a pair has finished, they compare their completed texts, which should be identical.
